

A new level of transparency for investors: Thomson Reuters included the IIB's forward curve to the Eikon services

September 4, 2017

Thomson Reuters, the leading provider of analytical information for businesses and experts, has included the forward curve of the International Investment Bank (IIB) to its flagship platform Thomson Reuters Eikon for users around the world. This user friendly solution provides data to investors to make on-line decisions on financial markets.

Thomson Reuters has proposed to include the IIB's forward curve to the Eikon toolkit, the curve is available for the users worldwide starting this August.

"The solutions by Thomson Reuters have significantly facilitated our front office and the Finance department accounting procedures. Thanks to this, the IIB has achieved a new level of information transparency, which corresponds to our strategic aims of developing and diversifying relations with financial institutions," - said Alexandru Florescu, the Deputy Chairman of the IIB Board.

"Our mission is to provide our customers and partners with technologies, expertise and reliable and complete data; the inclusion of IIB's forward curve in our flagman platform, Thomson Reuters Eikon, is an important step in reaching this goal", said Piotr Marczewski, Managing Director of Thomson Reuters in Russia and CIS.
