

IIB participates in syndicated lending to Acron Group

January 23, 2015

The International Investment Bank started the new year with participation in a syndicated lending to Acron Group — one of the world's major mineral fertilizer producers. The IIB's share in the five-year loan reaches USD 25 million.

By supporting a Russian producer export potential the Bank actually contributes to the development of the Group's international operations as the deal has also seen the participation of Societe Generale along with Rosbank in the organization of the syndication.

Participation in this project reflects IIB's strategic vision for necessity to support reliable national companies in its member states and their expansion to external markets in cooperation with leading international and national financial institutions.
